With the world population increasing at an alarming rate, global demand for timber products is also increasing. However, the global supply of millable timber is falling. Investing in New Zealand forestry is a secure and sustainable way to grow your wealth. New Zealand's competitive advantage is that we have some of the world's fastest growth rates with forests growing 750 tonnes of harvestable logs per hectare in just 28 years.

Forestry investment in New Zealand is very predictable, there are very rarely unforeseen costs.

Roger Dickie New Zealand has been in the forestry investment business for more than 30 years and has established and managed 88 individual Radiata Pine forests covering over 28,000 hectares for investors worldwide.

Roger Dickie New Zealand Limited specialises in finding, securing and developing the best farm and forest opportunities on behalf of investors and overseas clients. Our role is to act as independent agent for our clients, we find them the best farms and forest properties that are available. We engage independent expert consultants to produce feasibilities, cashflows, and valuations. We provide management and administration services, and ensure that the investment is transparent, fully accountable and measurable by providing detailed monthly operating financial information to the owners. All investments are backed by the security of land ownership.

Blessed with ideal climate and wide open spaces New Zealand is the ideal country for pastoral farming that grows healthy livestock for the production of dairy products and meat. New Zealand farmers are among the most efficient in the world and there are no Government subsidies for agriculture. With a population of just 4.3 million New Zealand produces enough animal food products to support the nation's own needs, combined with the need for export. The dairy industry is New Zealand's largest industry and Fonterra is the country's largest company, processing 22 billion litres of milk annually and supplying dairy based products to over 140 countries globally. The result being New Zealand is the world's largest exporter of dairy commodities, representing approximately one third of international dairy trade.

With the world population projected to reach 8 billion by 2030, world food shortages and price rises are inevitable. New Zealand is ideally placed to meet the increasing demand for animal food products. With efficient production methods, globally recognised and respected food brands, now is the time to invest in farms in New Zealand to profit from this future food shortage.

While Roger Dickie New Zealand Limited is welcomed in New Zealand as our primary investment vehicle, Roger is an experienced and highly skilled farmer in his own right with his family property milking 1,500 cows. Our company has also developed a further two dairy farms and a large sheep and beef farm for investors.

Overseas investors are attracted to New Zealand because of its stable government, its close exposure to the fast developing Asian markets and its established professional business practices. Our professional environment, combined with the presence of a financial market, provides a strong foundation for a sound business. New Zealand provides fresh climate looks in the countryside.
